Questions without Notice & Statements

Quarxilon: Thank you monsieur. On behalf of NOD MP dunc, who might be busy in real life right now, we would like to present a statement which can be converted to a bill later, probably next session. The idea is that parliament sessions be adjourned automatically. If the attendance is insufficient within the first 10 mins of parliament, time threshold can be negotiated. This could be a bill for next session, but we would like to gather initial opinions first.

THE PRIME MINISTER: Thank you Mr Speaker. I would like to ask my honourable friend what insufficient attendance means.

Quarxilon: Take this as a 0th reading so the number is still subject to the outcome of parliament debate since the number of seats may vary depending on election outcome and contesting party size. We initially propose a proportion reasonable enough to not cause too much bias within votes, probably 40% of all elected seats, just provisional. This is why we're considering making it an official bill because of the potential disruptive effect on parliament procedures. i.e. very very radical and destructive. any other questions can be presented once this is officially drafted. Now does the ruling party have any other proposals to table early?

Motion

Quarxilon Move that MPs are allowed to share music on the discord voice channel when parliament is in session

Quarxilon: This may sound ridiculous but, request to allow MPs to share music on the discord voice channel when parliament is in session, music that ties in with the current mood of course. contentious votes? go metal. consensus reached? victory trumpets. probably would encourage higher attendance

THE SPEAKER: What the honourable member is trying to propose here. The motions section of parliament is generally for discussion and deliberation on certain issues, and is not used for actual binding decisions, but if other members would like to make their points clear on this. Please do so.

THE SPEAKER: The question is that the house be adjourned.

Question put to the House and agreed on. (Adjourning this session)
